Good - bye, lit-tlegirl in Dix - ie, I am com - ing back to you,

Good - bye, lit-tlegirl in Dix - ie, But it's not fare - well for long,

— And when I re - turn I'll find you wait - ing, — For I know you are ev - er true;

— Ev - 'ry day my heart in time is beat - ing, — To the strains of a sum - mer song;

— Oh! it's hard to part when an ach - ing heart, Is for bid' to breathe a sigh,

— For it's fine to know That the long a - go, Will re - turn to the tran - quil sky,

— And where'er I stray_ I'll re - call that day, And your face as you said "Good - bye!"

— Where your word will be — As you turn to me, One of welcome and not "Good - bye!"

rall.

Chorus (Strict March Tempo)

On her lips was a smile when I kissed her, — In her eye was the glint of a p.f

tear; — And it's ma - ny a day Since I went my way, From the girl than all oth - ers more dear, — And in mem - o - ry still she is near - me, — As I jour - ney each long wea - ry mile, — For each sun - beam that gleams, Is so fair that it seems, Just an ech - o of her smile. — On her smile.
